Hats off to history

Tours through Hackney Town Hall, including a visit to the refurbished vaults, take place every two weeks and are available for school groups

FROM the outside, Hackney Town Hall looks like any other municipal building. But inside the walls lie vaults containing an abundance of treasures. Residents can view these and other delights, such as

Art Deco chandeliers and a Modernist marble bar, on a tour of the building organised by The Speaker of Hackney, Cllr

Clare Potter. The Speaker said: "The tour and vaults display bring to life the great history of democracy and activism associated with Hackney Town Hall. I would recommend everyone comes along to one of the tours." See page 3.

YOUNG FUTURES

THE Hackney Young Futures Commission, a major project aimed at amplifying the voice of young people in the borough, has been launched at Stoke Newington School.

Over the course of the next two years, the commission will hear what residents under the age of 25 think about living in the borough.

The commission will be chaired by young people and is set to look into how the under-25s view the borough, what challenges they face, and how they feel about local services – ensuring their voices are heard by the Council and its partners.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor, and Cllr Caroline Selman, Cabinet Member for Community Safety, Policy and the Voluntary Sector, spoke to Year 11 students at a school assembly on 23 January to launch the project and find out about young people's experiences of growing up in Hackney.

Cllr Bramble said: "It is only with direct knowledge of young people's experiences that we will be best placed to tackle the inequalities that are preventing them from getting the best start in life. That's why the work of the Young Futures Commission is so important."

Cllr Selman added: "We know Hackney's young people are full of ideas, passion and talent. We want to make sure that those ideas and thoughts are at the heart of how we design our services.

"Living knowledge of those experiences will help us work together in shaping the borough as it changes and grows."

Hackney Young Futures will be independent of the Council, but will be organised and accountable to it. The commission board will be made up of young people, community representatives, academic partners, those from the voluntary sector and councillors.

The project will be supported by a borough-wide youth engagement programme – set to take place across schools, youth hubs and community groups in spring – where the views of hundreds of local young people will be sought.

The first meeting of the Hackney Young Futures Commission is set to take place next month.

OWNERS of empty homes are set to be forced to pay double their Council Tax bill under plans approved by councillors this month.

The Empty Property Council Tax Premium will see homes that have been empty for two years or more charged extra. There are currently 419 properties which would qualify for the premium, which will raise an additional £200,000 a year.

The decision follows a change in Government legislation which allows councils to increase the premium from 50 per cent to 100 per cent if they wish.

Cllr Rebecca Rennison, Cabinet Member for Finance and Housing Needs, said: "It cannot be right that so many homes are lying empty while London is in the grip of a housing crisis.

"In Hackney alone we have over 13,000 people on our housing waiting list, and residents have been asking us to increase Council Tax for empty properties for a long time.

"Now we finally have the power to do that, we're pleased to be taking tough action to raise much needed income for the Council.

"We continue to invite the owners of empty homes to talk to us about renting out their property to a local family in need, so that homes can be put to use, rather than being treated purely as an investment."

The decision follows calls from residents to increase Council Tax for empty properties

The extra income will help to fund vital Council services, helping to plug the gap left by Government funding cuts. Since 2010, the Government has cut Hackney's grant by £140million – nearly half – and by 2022 it will have cut a further £30 million, while demand for services is increasing all the time.

The decision was agreed as part of the Council Tax Base and Local Business Rate Income report at the Council meeting on 23 January.

The Council will set its budget, including the rate of Council Tax for 2019/20 on 27 February.

Contactless donation sites to help homeless

THE first in a series of contactless donation points are being rolled out across the borough this month, to help charities combat homelessness.

Unveiled by the Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and Cllr Rebecca Rennison, the points take a donation of £3 from contactless cards, with 100 per cent of the donations split equally between the 22 charities within the London Homeless Charities Group.

The money is spent on providing essential services for rough sleepers across the capital. The terminals are run by TAP London, a not-for-profit organisation founded in Hackney in 2017, and is supported by the Mayor of London.

The first terminals are at Hackney Town Hall, Hackney Service Centre and at Climpson & Sons Cafe on Broadway Market.

Mayor Glanville said: "In an age where people don't carry change, but still want to help make a change, these donation points are crucial, so everyone can do their bit to help tackle homelessness."

Town Hall tours

Hackney Town Hall is once again throwing open its doors for free public tours; schoolchildren learn about local history

A MODERNIST marble bar, Art Deco chandeliers and secret vaults are among the treasures residents can see at Hackney Town Hall on one of the regular tours organised by the Speaker.

The hour-long guided tour sheds light on the building's origins and history, and includes a visit to the newly refurbished vaults. Opened to the public last year, the vaults hold a historical display on the architecture of the building, its representation as the symbolic centre of civic pride, and its function as a home of local democracy.

Hackney Town Hall is more than just a building: it represents both local government and the community, and provides a public space where the two can meet. The tours are a chance for people to explore their town hall, get a sense of what happens in the building, and learn how they can get involved.

Cllr Clare Potter, The Speaker of Hackney, said: "The tour and vaults display bring to life the great history of democracy and activism associated with Hackney Town Hall.

"I would recommend everyone comes along to one of the tours, as it's really important that citizens have ownership over their town hall, and discover how they can get involved locally and help make a positive contribution to the borough."

Hackney Town Hall tours take place every two weeks, with tours also available for school groups.

Groundwork London's new CIRCLE programme set to integrate refugees

Groundwork London's community garden

A GROUND-BREAKING new project to support refugees is to launch in Hackney, just as a Europe-wide report revealed just how important integration is to successful migration.

The charity Groundwork London, which is headquartered in Clapton, hopes to support 200 refugees across the capital with a new, two-year project. Called CIRCLE, it revolves around integrating refugees into their new homes through language classes and employment skills as well as activities like cooking and gardening.

Its launch coincided with the release of a new report by European think tank Bruegel.

Between 2015 and 2016, 2.5 million people sought asylum in Europe, the largest mass migration since the Second World War, the report revealed.

The faster these migrants are integrated into their new communities, the more they contribute to their host economies, it concluded.

Groundwork's Community Projects Manager, Danielle Johnson, said: "During our own consultations with refugees and refugee organisations it was clear there is a need for more integration support.

"The CIRCLE project will take a holistic approach. Each participant should feel confident meeting people in their community, whether that is over a cup of tea while cooking or gardening or more formally in a language class."

The programme will initially be based in Hackney, though the charity hopes it will expand. For more information, email: circle@groundwork.org.uk; or call: 020 8510 5420.

The Council has agreed to protect shops and launderettes from unchecked developments in order to support Hackney's town centres

Protect town centres

SHOPS and launderettes are set to be protected from unchecked development in areas facing rapid change under a new Council intervention.

Recent Government rule changes – called permitted development rights – mean that developers can bypass the Council, residents and local businesses and convert shops and launderettes into homes without needing to apply for planning permission.

Proposals agreed by the Cabinet on 21 January will stop these rules being applied in areas of the borough facing the biggest pressures from development.

The new measures, which are set to come into force on 11 February, mean that the Council can throw its weight behind keeping a range of diverse shops and businesses on all of Hackney's high streets.

As well as Dalston and Hackney Central town centres, the measures will help protect the borough's smaller shopping centres such as Dunsmore Road, Oldhill Street,

“We will use the powers we have to protect and support Hackney's thriving high streets and town centres”

Launderettes are set to be protected from 11 February

Green Lanes, Hackney Downs and Clapton.

Research and feedback from residents has shown that launderettes have an important role supporting residents living in the borough – particularly those on low incomes or living in temporary accommodation.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, said: “By removing the Government's short-sighted permitted development rights that allow landlords and developers to ignore local need and demand, these measures give residents and the Council a say on what happens to the business spaces along the borough's high streets.

“Everyone knows that there is a huge demand for more homes in the borough, but residents have said that their town centres matter.

“The Government's rules don't even require a landlord to provide any genuinely affordable homes and ministers clearly think that thriving town centres are created by pushing out local businesses.

“The Council can't control all development in the borough, but this will send a strong message that we will use the powers we have to protect and support Hackney's thriving high streets and town centres.”

While some local changes are out of the Council's control, it wants to maximise the benefits of growth for residents

Last September, the Council launched the ‘Dalston Conversation’ – a major initiative to provide residents, businesses and visitors with ways to talk about Dalston and what they love about the area, what they want to see improved and how they feel about the changes already happening.

Residents in other areas facing change will also be given the opportunity to have their say.

Call to rule out ‘no deal’ Brexit

A MOTION calling on the Prime Minister to rule out a ‘no deal’ Brexit and extend Article 50 if necessary – to avoid the UK leaving the EU with ‘no deal’ – was passed by the Council on 23 January.

The motion, proposed by Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, also supported the right of Parliament to stop such a ‘no deal’ scenario. He said: “The Council supports this action as a first credible step in achieving the call for a General Election or ensuring enough time is given for all options, including campaigning for a public or ‘people's vote’, with a clear option to remain in the EU, on the table.

“This would resolve the current political deadlock and provide the democratic endorsement, or not, of a final deal. The Council believes this is necessary to safeguard the wellbeing and prosperity of the residents and businesses of our borough.”

Hackney had the second highest Remain vote in the UK, with 78.5 per cent of people voting to stay in the EU.

Church restoration under way

A MULTIMILLION pound restoration project has begun to restore a Grade II* listed church to its former glory.

Work on St John-at-Hackney Church, in Lower Clapton Road, E5, will reconfigure the church to its original ‘Greek Cross’ plan, providing more space for church services and musical performances.

Designed by John Pawson, whose work includes the recently opened Design Museum in west London, the plans will also create two new chapels in the north and south wings, a raised stage and a range of new facilities. Rev Al Gordon, rector of Hackney, said: “We want to make this a place that brings life to the community long into the future, with everyone welcome to walk through our doors.”

The work has been made possible by a £1.84 million National Lottery grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund, and is due to be completed in the autumn.

THE first residents have moved into a new, Council-managed hostel, providing high-quality temporary accommodation to families in need.

The 148-room Royal Parks hostel, in the north of the borough, has been specially designed to meet the needs of homeless families on the housing waiting list. Each room has an ensuite bathroom and cooking facilities, with free internet access.

The hostel also has a free-to-use laundry room and communal rooms for older children to do their homework and socialise.

It is hoped that later in the year the communal garden will be used for growing vegetables, as well as providing an outdoor play space for younger residents.

The hostel provides temporary accommodation for families on the housing waiting list. While they are staying at the hostel, residents are supported to apply for a long-term home either via the Council, Housing Associations or in the private rented sector.

Royal Parks is one of 30 hostels – providing 789 units of temporary accommodation in the borough – run by the Council. Some of the residents living at Royal Parks were previously living outside the borough due to a lack of accommodation, meaning long or complicated journeys to work or school.

Agnes Johnson, a healthcare support worker, and her daughter Fathia, four, are among the first to move into Royal Parks.

Agnes said: “It’s good to have our own kitchen and bathroom – it’s nice to have our own space and room for Fathia to write and play.

“We’ve got a laundry room downstairs and dryers. It’s really good.”

Cllr Rebecca Rennison, Cabinet Member for Finance and Housing Needs, said: “The Council works hard to find suitable, long term homes for local people who find themselves homeless, but, with over 13,000 households currently on the housing waiting list, that is becoming increasingly challenging.

“Despite an ambitious Council home building programme, we simply don’t have enough properties to meet demand, meaning homeless households face increasingly long stays in temporary accommodation.

“Royal Parks is an example of what hostels for temporary accommodation should be like, and I’m proud that we’re able to offer families accommodation in a modern space with private facilities.

“This has been a long-term project, working closely with the building owner, to make sure it meets the needs of the people who will be staying here. Council-managed hostels like this mean that we can support residents more closely and work with them to find a permanent solution to their housing needs.”

Thank you, wonder women

Over 100 Hackney women were nominated for making a difference to the borough

MORE than 100 hundred Hackney women have been nominated for driving change and making a positive difference to the borough.

Last year, the Council asked people to nominate inspirational local women – past and present – for the contributions they have made to Hackney.

The nominations formed part of the Council's celebrations to mark the 100th anniversary of women over the age of 30 getting the vote for the first time in the UK.

The women are from a range of backgrounds and experiences. From police officers and youth workers to philanthropists and entrepreneurs, the list is extensive and inspiring.

Abigail Freeman has been working in tech and social innovation for a number of years. She was part of the founding team of the Mayor of Hackney's 2016 Business of the Year award, 'We Are Pop Up', and has since gone on to co-found a behaviour change and innovation practice called Brink.

Her nominator said: "She's an amazing woman, incredibly professional in her field, has tons of charisma and talent, and is truly motivated to make a difference in South Hackney."

Kristine Wellington, who has worked with Hackney CVS for nearly 20 years, was nominated for her contribution to community life. As the Safeguarding and Children and Families lead she has helped over 740 children from ethnic minority backgrounds transition to secondary school.

Her colleague wrote: "Kristine is a really strong woman at all levels, challenging discrimination and being a role model for others to follow. She works non-stop, often attending community events at weekends and in her spare time. Hackney CVS is lucky to have her, as is the borough at large."

Police Sergeant Sue Wright was nominated by her friend, who said: "She's a very clever woman, excelling in a male dominated industry, who has not only worked hard to get results, but has also willingly shared her knowledge, skills and drive with a lot of younger people, creating a legacy behind her."

NHS nurse Saira Ullah received multiple nominations, including from her daughter, who

"I live and work in Hackney so I am surrounded by amazing women every single day" said: "My mum has worked for the NHS since the age of 20, and has always provided ongoing support to her team and patients under her wing."

"She is a single mum who works full time, including weekends, to ensure young, unwell children across Hackney have the best service. She is the most loving and caring women and I truly believe she deserves this award."

"She is full of love and light. She deserves this award for her generosity, her kindness and her gentle touch to every situation. She is a truly inspiring woman and she will always be my role model."

For many, the nomination was a total surprise, such as Claire Reay, manager at the Ivy Street Clinic.

She said: "When I heard I was nominated I was absolutely thrilled and honoured. I live and work in Hackney so I am surrounded by amazing women every single day."

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: "I am delighted that we have been able to shine a light on some of the amazing stories of women who contribute to making Hackney an incredible borough to live and work in."

Reminder: women wanted to inspire next generation

THE Council is looking for women who live or work in the borough with an unusual job, an inspiring career, or work in a male-dominated environment to help inspire the next generation of young Hackney women. The fourth Council-run 'Inspiring Young Hackney Women' event is set to take place on 6 March.

The event will see local women share their stories in a bid to motivate and galvanise young women in the borough's schools, who will then take those spoken experiences to their peers. Women interested in taking part should email: xanthippi.karkantou@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3962.

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

hackneypeople

By Harriet Worsley

A FEW days after Katee Hui moved to the UK from Canada in order to study, she bumped into a new friend in the corridor of their shared halls. "I told her I was going to try out for the football team," explains Katee. "And she just looked at me and said: 'Don't do it. It's social suicide. Women don't play football here.'"

If only she could see Katee now. Seven years after launching Hackney Laces, a football club for teenage girls, Katee has been named London's Unsung Hero by the BBC. Two sister clubs have launched in other London boroughs, based on her Hackney original.

"The demand was there," says Katee, "even if everyone told me it wasn't."

Katee was raised in Hamilton, near Toronto. "When we were kids, my mum put my sister and I into lots of sports clubs," she says. "But football was the one that stuck. There's something so powerful about being part of a team."

Plus, she was good at it. So good, in fact, that she won a sports scholarship to university. "I could see that football was an enabler," she explains. "It could lead to great things, off the pitch as well as on."

In Canada, she says, football is not seen as 'something for the boys'.

So she was shocked to arrive in the UK as a young Masters student, and discover how hard it was to find places for girls to play.

"I started coaching for Islington Football Development," she says, but

Katee Hui, who set up Hackney Laces, a football club for teenage girls, was announced London's Unsung Hero in December back in Hackney: "I passed a couple of girls in the park, wearing my kit, and they asked where they could play. So I ended up taking them to Islington with me."

It was a slog. Katee had a full-time job. She would finish work, rush to Hackney, pick the girls up, take them to Islington, train, bring them back...

"One day, I was sitting on the 73 bus, worried that I was running late and would let the girls down when I thought: this is crazy. I need to set something up here, in Hackney."

So she told the girls to meet her on Stoke Newington Common and bring a few friends. "From two girls, it grew to eight and then 20..."

Four years later she was back on the 73 bus when her phone buzzed. She picked it up, and, she recalls: "It was someone from the Cabinet Office. They said: 'we have someone who wants to speak to you.'"

It was David Cameron.

“It's all about the little moments. For some of our girls, we are the most stable thing in their lives”

Katee had won a Point of Lights award, reserved for individual volunteers who have made real change in their community.

"I didn't know what to say to him," says Katee. "I had to be like: I'm so sorry, but this is my stop..."

Why does she think Hackney Laces expanded so quickly? Katee says: "We take anyone aged between 10 and 17, there are no trials, so it's very welcoming.

"Plus there's the cliché that if you can't see it, you can't be it," explaining that once girls realised football was available to them, they jumped straight in. But she means it in a more nuanced sense too.

"Our female coaches are also amazing role models," she says. The coaches come from a colourful spectrum of careers, some working in TV, others in architecture.

"At one stage, half the girls decided they wanted to be an architect, because of their coach," she adds.

Realising that this supportive community was a major strength, Katee decided to launch 'Off the Pitch'. For an hour after each weekly training session, she draws on her extensive network to help the girls with a wide range of issues in their lives.

"They might say: we're doing A-level maths and struggling with statistics, so we'll call our volunteers with expertise in that, and hold a session to help."

"Or we'll practise for college interviews, or talk about bullying..." There is a mental health nurse on their books.

For the last year, Hackney Laces has partnered with London Football Journey to make even more of these sessions, and Katee is confident that the club will go from strength to strength.

"I have a full-time job as a strategist in the creative industries," she continues. "It was never my ambition to do this. But now I know it works, it would seem wrong not to share it, and make sure as many girls as possible get to benefit from it."

"It's all about the little moments. For some of our girls, we are the most stable thing in their lives."

"One girl mentioned that she has a parents evening coming up in school and one of our coaches, an amazing woman who works in TV, ended up going with her. How cool is that?"

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: Can you recycle black plastic trays in Hackney?
We have some of the inner plastic trays from biscuit boxes and my mum and I are disagreeing!

A: Although the Council accepts black plastic trays in its recycling bins, they will often not get detected at the recycling plants due to their colour. Black, and some other colours, cannot be detected by optical sorting equipment at recovery facilities because the lasers cannot reliably identify them on the conveyor belt. This means many black plastic trays are likely to end up being burned at energy recovery plants, or even sent to landfill. Clear plastic trays are much easier to recycle, so it might be worth buying products with clear trays in the future. ## Red card for plastics

Alex Scott launches Plastic Pollution Challenge at Princess May Primary School, N16

As the Government calls for all schools to eliminate single-use plastics, children at one Hackney primary have had some Premier League persuasion.

Former Arsenal Ladies captain Alex Scott visited Princess May Primary School, in Stoke Newington, to help pupils devise their own creative solutions for reducing plastic pollution.

Her visit, on 11 January, launched a nationwide Plastic Pollution Challenge, by Sky and the Premier League, to help children learn how simple changes can make a positive impact on the environment and help prevent further ocean plastic pollution.

“Children are the future and will suffer most at the hands of single-use plastic”

Alex said: “All the children made their pledges about what they’re going to do; if that’s reusable bottles or not taking plastic bags.

“I think we’re going to make some change. Children are the future and will suffer most at the hands of single-use plastic, so I’m excited to see the kids taking a lead today, pledging to make changes to help save our planet.”

The Government has asked all schools to eliminate single-use disposable plastic by 2022.

According to Recycle Now, the average secondary school produces 22kg of general waste per pupil each academic year. The figure for primary schools is even higher at 45kg per pupil, twice the weight of the average six-year-old boy.

Kevin Reynolds, Princess May’s head teacher, said: “We were thrilled to welcome Alex Scott, and to support the Plastic Pollution Challenge. We are already doing our bit in school to make our pupils aware of plastic pollution.”

The Plastic Pollution Challenge will now be open to primary schools across England and Wales until 22 March. The pupils whose ‘pass on plastic’ pledges are judged the most creative will be awarded prizes, including a trip to the Sky Academy Studios and a visit from the Premier League trophy.

The Mayor and pupils from London Fields Primary at the launch of London Fields School Street last year

Restrictions enforced on Lansdowne Drive

THE Council has started enforcing a no entry restriction for vehicles travelling southbound on Lansdowne Drive, past the junction with Trederwen Road.

The restriction was introduced last year to support the Council’s pioneering School Street outside London Fields Primary, which helps children to walk and cycle to school by removing traffic from outside at opening and closing times, and to prevent rat-running through the London Fields area.

The Council has been issuing warning letters to allow drivers to get used to the new restriction, but enforcement has now started, and drivers will receive a fixed penalty notice if they breach the restriction.

The restriction only allows buses, pedestrians and cyclists to travel southbound through Lansdowne Drive, past the junction with Trederwen Road, between 7am and 10am and 3pm and 6pm, Monday to Saturday.

Stop and Search

Until 9 February, Arcola Theatre, 4 Ashwin St, Dalston, E8 3DL

WHERE does conversation end and interrogation begin? Can you trust the people whose job it is to protect you, if they are also targeting you?

These questions lie at the heart of the latest play to premier at the Arcola. 'Stop and Search' is written by Irish-Nigerian poet and playwright Gabriel Gbadamosi. Under the direction of the Arcola's own artistic director Mehmet Ergen, three distinct scenes play out on stage.

A driver with criminal associations picks up a young refugee heading towards the UK. Tensions simmer between two surveillance officers. Meanwhile, a young woman climbs into a mini cab and asks the driver to head for the edge of a bridge. We won't spoil the ending for you. Instead, here's how the writer himself sums it up: "The play opens the question of why a tactic aimed at policing drugs, violence and terrorism has grown into a flashpoint for wider, and deeper, flaws in a volatile and frightened social psyche."

'Stop and Search' is staged at the Arcola till 9 February. Tickets start at £15, with concessions available.

THE SPACE BETWEEN THINGS

Until 30 Mar, various opening times

A life-altering series of events serve as the origin for Kenyan-British artist Phoebe

Boswell's new work. In 'The Space Between Things', Boswell reflects on the rupture of her physical, spiritual and emotional health. Using her art-making to explore a landscape of grief, she invites us to bear witness to a journey of recovery and possible renewal. Free. Autograph, Rivington Place, Shoreditch, EC2A 3BA. ### Hackney Comedy Experience

8 February, Earth, 11-17 Stoke Newington Road, N16 8BH

BE warned: the last time Tim Key performed at Earth (that's Evolutionary Arts Hackney to the uninitiated) there were barely enough gaps between the laughs to allow his audience to breathe. Bravely, they've let him come back though, and added a whole line-up of award-winning comics to the bill. In fact, on 8 February, you can catch Key performing alongside Radio X podcaster and Edinburgh Comedy Award-winner John Robins, 'Plebs' and 'Friday Night Dinner' star Tom

Rosenthal, Viceland's Jamali Maddix, and Comedy Central regular Evelyn Mok. There are more names to be announced too, with organisers of the 'Hackney Comedy Experience', at the venue formally known as Hackney Arts Centre, promising 'household names, cult favourites and rising stars'. Just remember to breathe. Hackney Comedy Experience, 8 February, Earth. Tickets cost £17.50. To find out more, and to book tickets, visit: earthhackney.co.uk

Anna Chrystal Stephens: Anorak

Until 23 March, SPACE, 129-131 Mare Street, Hackney, E8 3RH

EVER felt like chucking it all in and running for the hills? Maybe take a wander round the new show at SPACE Mare Street first. Anorak, an exhibition of work by Anna Chrystal Stephens, explores the mythological hold that the wild has always held for city dwellers and which might now be peaking as we wake up to the ecological crises that urbanisation and industrialisation have created. Stephens arranges guides for self-building into an archive, displays fire-starting tools in the form of a specimen chart, catalogues typologies of tarpaulin structures. 21st-century camping kit like Gore-Tex and polyester rope are woven in with twigs and pallets to make shelters, banners and wands. It is colourful, disconcerting and above all, darkly beautiful. Anna Chrystal Stephens: Anorak runs at SPACE Mare Street until 23 March. Entrance is free of charge. A BUS and a Tube train have been squeezed inside Hackney Museum as part of an annual scheme that teaches children how to make better choices in a range of scenarios.

The Junior Citizenship Scheme, now in its 12th year, teaches pupils aged 10 and 11 from over 50 Hackney primary schools important skills to help them become more independent as they prepare for the transition to secondary school.

Activities were brought to life with models and backdrops, and the children's interest was sustained thanks to the energy of speakers from a range of agencies.

During the day, youngsters learnt about waiting safely for buses and trains, recognising sugary drinks, dealing with peer pressure, using 11-15 Oyster Zip cards and what to do and who to contact in case of an emergency.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, who attended one of the sessions, said: "As well as helping our young people become good citizens, this brilliant scheme helps them build valuable life skills that means they can

Jayden, 11, from St Scholastica's Catholic

Primary School, E5, said: “It's been really fun and really good in helping me learn about keeping safe when I'm getting to school. It also makes me think more about how I can help other people.”

Keira Cullen, Year 6 teacher from Queensbridge Primary School, E8, added: “It's such a great scheme to get children ready for secondary school.”

It all adds up to a great result

FOUR A-level maths students from Mossbourne Sixth Form, E5, finished in sixth place, out of 26 competing schools, in the regional heat of the UK Mathematics Trust (UKMT) Senior Maths Challenge.

Team captain, Linus, said: “I really enjoyed both the training sessions and the day itself, and I am really proud of how we worked together as a team.”

Hospital hosts internships

NINE local young people with learning disabilities and autism have entered the second term of their 'Project SEARCH' internships based at Homerton hospital.

Launched by the Council's Supported Employment Service, this is the first year the programme, which aims to remove barriers faced by young jobseekers with disabilities, has been run in Hackney.

The students, aged between 17 and 23, spent their first week in a classroom setting at the hospital learning personal and professional skills before embarking on their work placements.

Summai Lerner-Edgell, 17, from Clapton, said: “I tried mainstream jobs and they just weren't right for me. I didn't receive the support I needed and so this is a really important opportunity.”

Bridging the gap in civil engineering

NEARLY 200 hundred primary schoolchildren have walked across a bridge they designed and built entirely themselves.

Pupils from Hackney were among 180 to take part in a civil engineering project at Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park. Led by engineers, the pupils designed and built their own 19-metre cable bridge.

Then, wearing hard hats, high-vis vests, gloves and goggles, each child was allowed to walk across the bridge, putting their own engineering skills to the test.

The exercise was part of a 'Bridges to Schools' programme, led by the London Legacy Development Corporation, Institution of Civil Engineers and Balfour Beatty.

Launched in 2012, it aims to inspire young people to consider career in science or engineering and encourage them to improve their maths and physics skills.

Paul Brickell, Executive Director of Regeneration and Community Partnerships, said: “Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park – and the businesses, universities and cultural institutions that are all locating here – are all about creating opportunities for local people.

“We are hoping that the young people who come to 'Bridges to Schools' will be inspired to take up careers in engineering and will work on the many great projects here and beyond.”

Talk Changes is a free and confidential NHS service for residents experiencing mental health problems; Jon Wheatley, Consultant Clinical Psychologist

CAN'T shake off the January blues? In England, one in six people experience problems such as depression, stress or anxiety. But help is at hand in Hackney from the Talk Changes service.

The free and confidential NHS service, for anyone over the age of 18 registered with a GP in City and Hackney, offers a range of psychological therapies for people who are experiencing common mental health problems, such as depression or anxiety.

Jon Wheatley, Consultant Clinical Psychologist at Talk Changes, said: "We offer a range of different psychological therapies, sometimes known as 'talking therapy', for anyone who is experiencing depression, anxiety or worrying excessively.

"Depending on the initial assessment, there are a number of possible options that we may recommend and that people can choose from, depending on personal preference and what is most convenient.

"It could be face-to-face sessions, by telephone, or following a course online supported by an experienced practitioner.

"For some people it might be helpful to meet as part of a group that provides information and strategies on how to manage stress, improve sleep and other problems.

"We can help people change the way they think and behave, dealing with the negative thoughts that can trap us in a vicious circle. Our approach is to help people achieve their goals and make changes in their day-to-day lives.

"I'd encourage anyone who needs help to take the first steps and improve the new year ahead of them."

News in brief

Have your say on local stroke services at free workshop

CITY and Hackney residents affected by stroke are being encouraged to share their thoughts on local support and services at a free workshop on 5 February.

The 'Let's Talk about Stroke' event will give residents who have had a stroke, or care for someone who has had a stroke, the opportunity to talk about their experiences of local services they receive at home or in the community, and how they can be improved.

Hosted by the Council and City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) the event will feature a number of sessions to gather views about how local services can support residents once they have returned from hospital after suffering a stroke.

Dr Mark Rickets, Chair of City and Hackney CCG, said: "We'll use this valuable feedback to ensure services can be designed to help meet the needs of everyone."

The 'Let's Talk about Stroke' event is set to take place from 1pm to 3pm at Graeae Theatre Company, 138 Kingsland Road, E2 8DY. The event is free and includes refreshments and lunch. Book a place by 30 January by contacting Eeva Huoviala on: 020 3816 3227; or email: eeva.huoviala@nhs.net

Feed back on GP practices through patient survey

PATIENTS registered at City and Hackney GP practices are set to be invited to take part in a national survey about their experiences. The survey includes questions about satisfaction, ease of access and continuity.

Market research company IPSOS-MORI posts the survey to about five per cent of patients a year. If you receive one please fill it in to help improve local services.

Brain injury survivors produce t-shirts for The Colour of Jazz

A LOCAL visual artist, a charity for survivors of brain injury and some of the world's most famous jazz musicians. It seems an unlikely partnership, yet the fruits of this unique collaboration are now on sale in the form of t-shirts.

The Colour of Jazz is a project by artist Coline L'Achiver and Submit to Love Studios, a collective of self-taught artists. Based at Headway East London on Kingsland Road, its members have all survived a serious head injury.

Working with Coline, the artists took inspiration from jazz musicians to produce artwork that was printed onto t-shirts.

"There is a connection between music and unconscious parts of the brain", said Chris Miller from Submit to Love Studios. Adding: "In a similar way, there is a connection between art and colour that does not depend on language, physical ability or thought."

The project concludes with a fundraising event on 23 February, at Chats Palace, from 7pm until 11.30pm. The line-up includes Grand Union Orchestra, Camilla George and Lex Blondin, with food courtesy of local Senegalese pop-up Little Baobab.

Hackney's got talent

WHATEVER the era, everyone has their dreams. Some 40 years ago these children had their dreams too.

But this is all we currently know about them. Looking at these photographs, taken in 1978 by R A Gibson's studio, we can guess that we're looking at a young people's amateur theatre group. What happened to these young talents? Did they follow their dreams?

Staff at Hackney Archives would love to hear from anyone who recognises the performers or the venue.

Hackney Archives, based in Dalston, is carrying out a two-year project to digitise images from Gibson's studio so that they can be shared with local people at events around the borough and online.

A key part of the project involves interviewing people who appear in the photographs so that their stories can be preserved as part of the history of Hackney.

More photos from RA Gibson's studio are on display at Hackney Museum and at: flickr.com/photos/hackney\_archives

MORE INFO

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. Kale is from the brassica family (such as cabbage, broccoli, Brussels sprouts and cauliflower) which are highly regarded for their high vitamin A carotenoids, vitamin C, folic acid, antioxidant and fibre content. Kale is particularly high in vitamin K. Freekeh is dried green wheat, harvested while the grains are still soft, then sun-dried. It is very common in the Middle East and North Africa, and is used in the same way as bulgur, couscous or pearled spelt. Freekeh has a very high fibre content. This winter salad makes a great side dish and the leftovers can easily be reheated for a warming lunch. The dish can be eaten alone or with baked fish or meat.

Kale, freekeh and parmesan salad with a tahini dressing

Preparation time 15 mins
Cooking time 40 mins
Makes 2 servings

Ingredients

- 1 bunch of kale, finely shredded
- Handful of green olives
- 50g parmesan or pecorino cheese
- 2 tbsps pumpkin seeds
- 2 tbsps sunflower seeds
- 200g freekeh wheat
- 1 vegetable stock cube

Dressing

- 1 finely chopped shallot
- Juice of 1 lemon
- 2 tbsps extra virgin olive oil
- 3 tps tahini
- Honey to taste

Method

- Start by making the dressing. In a small bowl, combine the shallot with the lemon juice

- Allow to sit for 5-10 minutes before whisking in the olive oil, tahini, and honey. Add a splash of water if it is too thick
- Wash the freekeh thoroughly, place in the pan with the stock cube, cover with water 3cm deeper than the wheat
- Bring up to a boil and simmer for about 25mins. Top up with water if you need to. The freekeh will still be a bit chewy when cooked, similar to brown rice
- Remove kale stalks and shred as finely as possible, add in the dressing. Really mix it well, preferably with your hands, and then allow it to rest for ten minutes
- Heat a pan (with no oil) add the seeds. Keep moving them until they start to brown. Remove from heat
- Slice the olives, shave the cheese and add into the kale
- Once the freekeh is cooked (drain it, if there is water still in the pan) leave to cool for 5 minutes and then add to the kale. Sprinkle with the toasted seeds and serve

Have your say on proposals for products prescribed on the NHS

RESIDENTS and patients are being encouraged to have their say on proposals to reduce the prescribing of eight products (see box out).

The consultation, from NHS England and NHS Clinical Commissioners – a group of clinical commissioning groups (CCGs) that are responsible for buying local healthcare services – sets out to provide a nationally co-ordinated approach of items that should not routinely be prescribed in primary care.

NHS England advises patients often receive medicines for which there are other more effective, safer and/or cheaper alternatives.

Dr Haren Patel, GP lead for prescribing at City and Hackney CCG, said: “I would like to encourage all residents and patients to respond to this important national consultation, that is likely to affect the future availability of certain prescribed products on the NHS.

“Please review all parts of the consultation as NHS England have suggested different proposals for each of the eight products including changes to make some prescribing safer, as well as prescribing more effective alternatives.

“Your NHS needs your input to shape its work.”

For more information, or to have your say, visit: engage.england.nhs.uk/consultation/items-routinely-prescribed-update/

A consultation engagement meeting is set to take place at 6 Avonmouth Street, Elephant & Castle, SE1 6NX, on 5 February from 2.30 to 5.30pm.

An online webinar meeting is set to take place on 14 February, from 1 to 2pm. To book a place on either meeting, visit the website above.

The consultation closes on 28 February.

The products are:

- Silk garments – used for eczema and dermatitis
- Aliskiren – used to treat blood pressure
- Amiodarone – used to treat abnormal heart rhythms
- Bath and shower moisturising preparations
- Dronedarone – used to treat the heart condition atria fibrillation
- Minocycline – used to treat acne
- Blood glucose testing strips for type 2 diabetes
- Needles for pre-filled and reusable insulin pens for diabetes.
